
 r/fivethirtyeight • 4 mo. ago

[deleted]

Nate Cohn: the most important poll you've never heard of came out today—the Pew National Public Opinion Reference Survey

x.com

Open

 120

 231

 Share

 HostingerCOM • Promoted

Shop Now

hostinger.com

Hosting

+ FREE domain

79% OFF

Black Friday deal

$2.49/mo

with a 3-year plan

+ Add a Comment

Sort by: Best

Search Comments

 Ice_Dapper • 4mo ago •

Comparison to 2020:

2020
Democrats: 51%
Republicans: 46%

2024
Republicans: 47%
Democrats: 46%

40 (2.5/3.0) | N=5,626 | Feb 1 - June 10

 81   Reply ...

+ 51 more replies

 [deleted] OP • 4mo ago •

TLDR, this is considered the highest response rate survey in the country because it has financial incentives. It's often used to help set weights for political polls. For the first time ever, Republicans beat Democrats in Party ID by one point. Last year Democrats led by two points

I'm not a professional pollster but I would imagine that some polls will get slightly better for Republicans now because pollsters will expect the electorate to be slightly more Republican and weigh their party ID accordingly

  126   Reply ...

 mcsul • 4mo ago •

r/fivethirtyeight

Join

FiveThirtyEight
FiveThirtyEight delivers analysis of politics from campaign fundraising to election day and beyond. This sub follows...

Show more

 Public

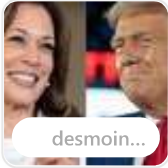

39K Members

1.1K Online

Top 3% Rank by size

 r/fivethirtyeight

Des Moines Register/Selter: Harris 47%, Trump 44%

9.5K upvotes · 2K comments

 r/fivethirtyeight

Ralston Predicts Narrow Harris Win in NV (48.5% to 48.2%)

1.4K upvotes · 531 comments

 r/fivethirtyeight

There are no scapegoats for the Democrats this time

1.3K upvotes · 1.4K comments

positions. I highly recommend that data-minded people interested in political (aka all of us here on this sub) bookmark it and use it to check your own assumptions about what the broader electorate believes.

 6   Reply ...

[deleted] • 4mo ago •

Going from party ID +2 (D) to +1 (R) does make a lot of the crosstab fussing circa a month ago silly. As it turns out, pollsters probably were onto something with "overrepresenting" Republicans. Doubly so when the crosstab was 18 - 29.

  76   Reply ...

Express_Love_6845 • 4mo ago •

Do you think this supports the idea that polls currently are underestimating Trump?

 21   Reply ...

 116 more replies

devilmaydance • 4mo ago • Edited 4mo ago •

Okay, I am officially not stressing over the election anymore.

Either polling is fundamentally broken and Democrats win, or we've seen an historic demographic shift and Republicans win in a blowout.

Either way, the people get what they voted for, I guess.

  47   Reply ...

PuffyPanda200 • 4mo ago •

Marist Final National Poll - Harris 51 to Trump 47

1K upvotes · 417 comments

r/fivethirtyeight

1 in 8 women say they've secretly voted differently than...

888 upvotes · 344 comments

...

nope.

On a slightly anecdotal level. I am currently visiting my parents who live in WA 8th district. Kim Schrier, a Democrat, is the rep from here. The district is East of Seattle and includes a lot of quite red areas, Cook has it at D+1.

This is the exact district that I would expect to flip if there was a wave Republican year so who is Schrier's opponent?

Cameron Goers who has a grand total of 26,439 USD on hand as of March 31st (Schrier has literally 100 times the cash on hand). Goers has not held public office, she ran in a WA house seat primary and got 5th overall, 3rd among Rs (WA has a jungle primary). I am in the conservative part of the district and there are no signs for her. There are limited signs for Reichert and Bird, the two Rs running for Governor, yes, two. Reichert was the rep from this district before Schrier.

WA's 3rd district which is listed as R+5 and had a 2% chance of electing a D (R incumbent lost out on primary) in 2022 but then did elect a D is looking a bit better for Rs. The D candidate has 5x the cash on hand of the leading R. The leading R candidate is also the guy who lost to the D candidate in 2022. The race in 2022 was very close. The candidates names are Marie Gluesenkamp Pérez, and Joe Kent.

The primary will be held in early August if you want to check it out. It is a jungle primary so it might have some insights as to how the electorate is feeling.

I would be interested in a 538 piece on the percentage chance that Trump wins the popular vote and both of these seats stay D. I would guess that it is basically zero though.

↑ 6 ↓ ○ Reply ...

⊕ 2 more replies

AKAD11 • 4mo ago •

This is where I'm at. Just sitting here waiting to see if this bloc of young conservative non-voters is real.

↑ 11 ↓ ○ Reply ...

DarthEinstein • 4mo ago •

A historic demographic shift in 2 years.

Log In

[deleted] • 4mo ago •

In 2020 the split was 51 D - 46 R. The last time the parties were at parity was 2004 which was the last time the Republican won the popular vote.

I may be jumping the gun here but surely this is just terrible for Democrats

↑ 26 ↓ Reply ...

⊕ 1 more reply